

The End

Camille's Great Vacation
Written by Camille

Camille's Great Vacation Around the World

Nine stops. One suitcase.
Zero boring days!

Hello, World!

Hi, I'm Camille! If you peeked into my bedroom in Richmond, Virginia, you might have noticed my bed was empty. Don't worry. I wasn't lost, and I wasn't missing. I was on the biggest adventure of my whole life!

It all began with one very boring Tuesday. Then I found a shiny golden ticket tucked inside my suitcase. It said: ONE TRIP AROUND THE WORLD. NO BORING DAYS ALLOWED. I grabbed my suitcase, tucked my stuffed corgi under my arm, and whispered, "Let's go!"

RULE 1

Try one brand new food in every place.

RULE 2

Dance whenever there is music.

RULE 3

Say hello to everybody.

Where Next, Camille?

Your turn! Where should Camille go on her next adventure?

Draw it here!

She should go to _____

She would eat _____

She would hear _____

Say It Like Camille

Japan

Hello: Konnichiwa

Thank you: Arigatou

Mongolia

Hello: Sain baina uu

Thank you: Bayarlalaa

Maldives

Hello: Assalaamu alaikum

Thank you: Shukuriyaa

Hawaii

Hello: Aloha

Thank you: Mahalo

England

Hello: Hello!

Thank you: Cheers!

Mexico

Hello: Hola

Thank you: Gracias

Try saying hi to a friend in a brand new language today!

Stop 1: Tokyo, Japan

WHOOSH! The ticket glowed, and I landed in Tokyo in a swirl of pink cherry blossoms. Under a giant red lantern, I said my first "Konnichiwa!" That means hello.

Lanterns and Drums

The old Asakusa market was crowded with shops and every one of them smelled delicious. A shopkeeper taught me how to bow, and I bowed so many times my hair bounced.

I bought a warm, fish-shaped cake called taiyaki, stuffed with sweet red beans. Just then, a group of drummers started a thunderous taiko beat. I danced right in the middle of the street, and everyone clapped!

EAT

Taiyaki, a fish-shaped cake with sweet red beans

HEAR

Taiko drums that rumbled all the way to my toes

MEET

Yuki, who taught me to say "Oishii!" (delicious)

Camille's Travel Log

1

Tokyo, Japan

Taiyaki and taiko drums

2

Mongolia

Dumplings and a golden eagle

3

The Maldives

Snorkeling and island drums

4

Hawaii

Hula and shave ice

5

London, England

Scones and double-decker buses

6

Florida

Sandcastles and key lime pie

7

Alaska

Skiing and the northern lights

8

Cozumel, Mexico

Diving and mariachi

9

Chicago, Illinois

Deep-dish pizza and the blues

10

Richmond, Virginia

My own cozy bed!

The End...Or Is It?

Here is what I learned: the whole world is full of friendly people, yummy food, and music that makes your feet want to move. And the best part is that the same is true right outside my front door!

Riding my bike down my own street, with the wind in my hair, felt just like an adventure too. Maybe an adventure is not about how far you go. Maybe it's about saying yes, saying hello, and keeping your eyes wide open.

So where should I go next? Turn the page and tell me!

Love, Camille

Stop 2: Mongolia

Next I zoomed to the windy grasslands of Mongolia, where a golden eagle named Altan landed on my arm. Sain baina uu! (Hello!)

Home on the Grassland

A herder family invited me into their round white tent, called a ger. It was warm inside and smelled like woodsmoke. Grandmother Naran handed me a bowl of salty milk tea and a plate of steamed dumplings called buuz. I ate five!

After dinner, the cousins played a fiddle with a carved horse head on top. They taught me a galloping dance, and we stomped until the whole ger shook. Then we lay in the grass and counted more stars than I knew existed.

EAT

Buuz, steamed dumplings with juicy meat inside

HEAR

The morin khuur, a fiddle with a horse-head top

MEET

Altan, a golden eagle with a very serious stare

The Next Morning

I woke up with sand in my shoes and, I'm pretty sure, a tiny bit of Hawaiian sunshine in my hair. I put on my green helmet, hopped on my pink bike, and zoomed out of the driveway!

Dreams of Everywhere

Do you know the best part of a big adventure? Coming home to the people and things you love.

I slept for a very long time, and I dreamed of everywhere at once. I dreamed of drums in Japan, a golden eagle in Mongolia, and a shark that wanted to be friends. In my dream, they were all dancing together in a big circle, and I was dancing right in the middle.

My suitcase was full of seashells, flags, and stories, and I couldn't wait to share every single one.

Stop 3: The Maldives

A seaplane splashed down in the Maldives, a sparkling chain of more than a thousand tiny islands. My hut stood on stilts right over the water. I could watch fish swim by from my hammock!

Island Time

I sipped a fruity punch with a pink umbrella, and then I put on a mask and snorkeled. A sea turtle paddled beside me, and a manta ray as wide as a trampoline glided underneath.

That night, a fisherman named Hassan grilled tuna right on the beach. Drummers began a boduberu, with big drums and clapping that got faster and faster. The waves in the lagoon even glowed blue, like someone had spilled glitter in the sea.

EAT

Fresh grilled tuna with sweet coconut

HEAR

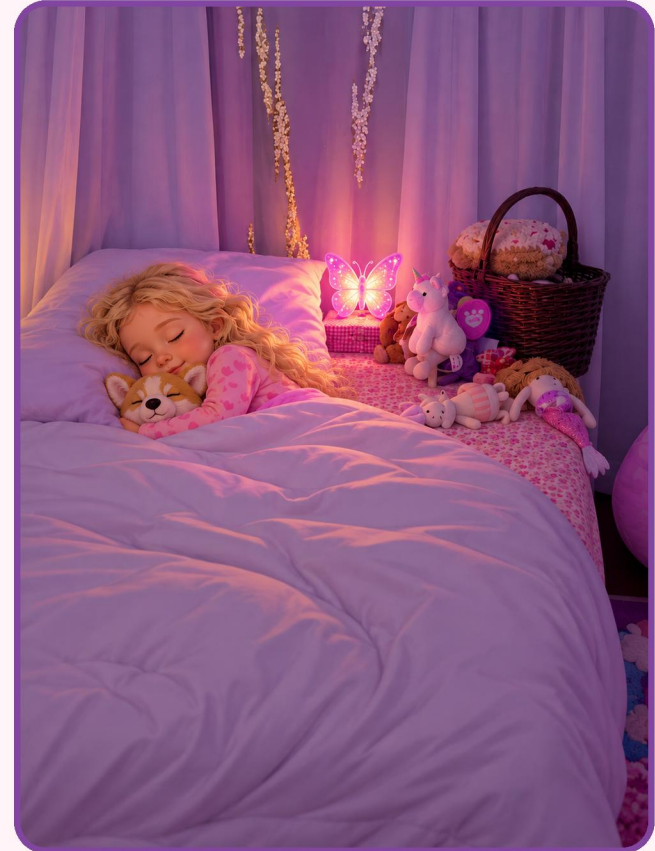

Boduberu drums that make everyone dance faster

MEET

Hassan, a fisherman who let me steer his boat

Home Sweet Home

The last whoosh landed me in my own bed in Richmond, Virginia. My own pillow. My own butterfly night-light. I fell asleep before I finished my yawn.

Lights of the City

Before bed, I took a boat ride down the Chicago River. The buildings were so tall I had to lean all the way back to see the tops. Our guide pointed out the Willis Tower, which scrapes the clouds.

For dinner, I ate deep-dish pizza so thick it needed a fork. The cheese stretched out as long as my arm! In a park nearby, a blues band wailed on a saxophone and a harmonica. A doorman named Frank handed me a warm cookie and wished me goodnight.

EAT Deep-dish pizza with cheese that stretched for miles

HEAR A blues band with a saxophone and a harmonica

MEET Frank, a doorman with the best warm cookies

Stop 4: Honolulu, Hawaii

Aloha! I touched down on Waikiki Beach just as the sun began to set. Someone placed a necklace of flowers, called a lei, around my neck. A luau was about to begin!

The Luau

The hula dancers told whole stories with their hands. I saw rain falling, waves rolling, and birds flying. A dancer named Leilani pulled me up to join them, and I swayed my hips like the ocean.

The feast was amazing: sweet pineapple, pork cooked slowly in an underground oven, and shave ice in every color. A musician strummed a tiny ukulele. Its name means "jumping flea" because the fingers hop so fast. Mahalo means thank you, and I said it about a hundred times.

EAT

Shave ice and juicy fresh pineapple

HEAR

A ukulele, which means "jumping flea"

MEET

Leilani, a dancer who taught me the hula

Stop 9: Chicago, Illinois

My last stop was the Windy City! My hotel room had a window full of twinkling skyscrapers and a river that sparkled like jewelry. I was tired in the very best way.

Under the Sea

The coral reef was a whole city under the water. Yellow and blue fish zipped past, a sea turtle glided by, and a moray eel peeked out of a cave. Then a shark swam right over my head! My heart did a flip, but my guide, Lucía, gave me the OK signal. Sharks are mostly curious, not hungry.

Back on the dock, I tried tacos with pineapple and the creamiest guacamole ever. A mariachi band marched up with trumpets and violins, and I danced until my flippers fell off.

EAT

Tacos al pastor with fresh guacamole

HEAR

Mariachi trumpets and violins on the dock

MEET

Lucía, a guide who knows every fish by name

Stop 5: London, England

Next I popped up beside the River Thames, right under Big Ben! The clock tower bonged, red buses zoomed past, and two guards in scarlet and gold posed for a photo with me.

Tea Time in London

Did you know the guards in red are called Beefeaters? One of them, Mr. Hargrove, told me secrets about an old castle full of ravens. Then I rode in the very front seat on top of a double-decker bus and pretended I was driving.

For afternoon tea, I stirred my cup with my pinky out. I ate fluffy scones with jam and thick cream. (People argue about which goes on first!) A street singer played a Beatles song on the guitar, and the whole crowd sang along.

EAT

A warm scone with strawberry jam and cream

HEAR

A street singer and a whole crowd singing along

MEET

Mr. Hargrove, a Beefeater who loved my jokes

Stop 8: Cozumel, Mexico

From snowflakes to bubbles! In Mexico, I strapped on a tank, flippers, and a mask and dove into the warm sea. "Hola!" I tried to say, but only bubbles came out.

Snow Day

"Make a pizza, not french fries!" called my instructor, Sam. That means point your skis in a wedge to slow down. I wobbled, I wiggled, and I fell on my bottom six times. But by the afternoon, I was zigzagging down the mountain like a pro.

At the lodge, I had hot chocolate piled with marshmallows. That night, the sky filled with ribbons of green and purple light. They were the northern lights! Everyone around the fire stopped talking, and the only sound was a fiddle playing softly.

EAT

Hot chocolate with a mountain of marshmallows

HEAR

A fiddle by a crackling fire

MEET

Sam, a ski teacher who never stopped smiling

Stop 6: Florida

After so much city, I wanted sand! I hopped to a Florida beach and built a sandcastle with four towers. Then I found a giant shell, held it to my ear, and heard the ocean whisper hello.

Sunshine State

A girl named Marisol spotted my castle and said it needed a moat. We dug and dug until the moat was as long as a jump rope. When a wave crashed over it, we shrieked and laughed and started all over again.

Later, we shared a slice of key lime pie that was tangy and sweet and cold. At sunset, a band played steel drums that sounded like bubbling water. We danced barefoot in the sand while dolphins jumped in the waves.

EAT

Key lime pie, tangy and sweet and ice cold

HEAR

Steel drums that sounded like bubbling water

MEET

Marisol, an expert sandcastle engineer

Stop 7: Alaska

Brrr! I swapped sand for snow in the mountains of Alaska. I zipped into a pink snowsuit and signed up for ski school. My first run was wobblier than a bowl of jelly!